School life in the Artic

Listen and read. Then answer the questions.

Children who live in the small Inuit villages of Greenland or Alaska go to very small schools. In some schools there are only about 20 children!

They study the same subjects as other children. Here they're having an Art lesson in the Art lab. They do PE, too. They also learn about their culture and their traditions!

In winter there's lots of snow and children like making snowmen.
